About R.E.A.A.C.T

The Recovery Effort After Adult/Child Trauma (R.E.A.A.C.T) program began as a research project focused exclusively on how children cope with trauma associated with house fires.

With the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, and other threats against safety, the need for a more extensive approach became necessary.

With the cooperation of several grants and initiatives from various universities, government agencies, and social services, the R.E.A.A.C.T team now addresses the needs of parents and children affected by multiple forms of crisis and trauma.
